The lone bill introduced Thursday at the first sitting of the legislative session deals with dead people who suddenly come back to life.

The Survivorship and Presumption of Death Amendment Act sets out what will happen if someone who has been missing and presumed dead suddenly reappears.

The bill sets out that assets of the "dead" person not yet distributed go to the person who has "come back to life." All other assets which may have been distributed to relatives or friends must stay with those people.

Ford's Puerto Rican Gaffe

It could, but probably won't, make this city think again about its immigration policy, which is a mess. Will have a population of over 100 million at the end of the century — former president the figure would be nearer to 127 million by that time — so this is an increasing problem, and there is no wall high enough along a 2,000-mile border that can keep these from comping from a proprior propriate the propriate that the propriate propriate the propriate prop them from coming from a poor country to

> The movement of legal immigrants is a different and more manageable question. This is determined by the congress of the United States. Congress established a quota system which until 1965 followed the trend of immigration in the first half of this century — favoring applicants from western and eastern Europe, according to the immigration patterns of the past.
> Since 1965, different quotas have been applied to Latin America and Asia, and the official figures for fiscal 1975 indicate a dramatic shift in the human traffic from abroad. For example, 62,000 legal immigrants from Mexico in fiscal 1975 more than the total from Britain (12,000), Germany (5,000), France (2,000), Greece (10,000), Italy (11,000), and Portugal

How to deal with the unemployment problems when there are more illegal aliens in the U.S. than unemployed? How to analyze the effect on this nation of the shifting pattern of immigration from Europe to Latin America and Asia?

about a nation with unacceptably high rates of unemployment that won't do its own work, but imports or tolerates an army of illegal servants to harvest its fruit and vegetables and serve its tables?

This is not merely a problem of hiring a new class of manual laborers, waiters, dishwashers, etc., to do the menial dog work of life in America, but even the medical profession is relying on immigrants to serve the hospitals of our great cities, and take jobs in the little communities of the nation that can't find American doctors valiant service of village life.

Frivolous

In short, there are fundamental ques tions of domestic and foreign policy here which President Ford has touched on. almost frivolously in the last days of his administration. They are not primarily questions of the future of Puerto Rico, but of the future of the United States and its relations with its neighbors, the source of its immigrants, the integrity of its laws, the future of its economy, and the willingness of its own people to do its own

Whether Puerto Rico is a state or a commonwealth, these problems will remain — including the appalling problems of unemployment and exploitation of the Puerto Rican people in the island, and their life of welfare and footstamps here in the continental United States. But Ford has at least given us a chance to turn our attention, long overdue, to the Caribbean and Central America, and it will be interesting to see whether Carter gives it the serious attention it has deserved for a very

Elizabeth rambled on at great length in her attempt to portray what a boon the event was for the troubled economy of the province by providing a shot in the arm for from taxi companies and hotels to hairdressers and dry cleaners. The list was, in fact, so long and explicit that about the only enterprises omitted or overlooked were massage parlors and funeral homes.

beliefs that this extravaganza is really so effective as a cure for the province's ailing economy then, of course, such an affair should be held not only once a year, but at feast two or three times every week. This should then enable us to say goodbye for ever to the economic woes of B.C. providing, of course, like Elizabeth, we can conveniently overlook the tens of thousands of unemployed loggers, miners, shipyard workers and other unfortunates who are on the wrong side of the wrought iron fence which surrounds Government

Holding the event twice weekly would also give almost everyone in B.C. a chance to partake of this spectacular freeble, for it presently seems that of all those mentioned in Elizabeth's list, the dry cleaning industry is getting the lion's share of the business generated by the state ball, for it is not only the tuxedos and gowns she writes of that are being taken to the cleaners, but also the millions of uninvited B.C. taxpayers. - C. Readers attack Elizabeth Forbes' assertion that state ball boosts economy.

State Ball

It is interesting to note that on the first page of the Victoria Times of Jan. 8 we learn that there are tens of thousands of people in the world who are hungry all the time and that Victorians have not been particularly generous in their donations to the Unitarian Service Committee.

On page 13 there is a picture of two men who attempt day after day to find employment. One of them "has been turning up religiously each week day for three months and so far hasn't had a single day's work." And then on page 25 we have Miss Forbes telling us how lucky we are that there is to be a state ball this year. It seems that the purchase of new gowns, footwear, jewelry, etc., not to mention the food and liquor, all contribute to a boost in the economy. The contrast between her column and the other two items is almost obscene. I am not against any of the taxpayers money being used for such frivolity as the state ball while thousands die each day throughout the un-derdeveloped countries of the world, and right here in British Columbia many still live in a state of deprivation: — Grumbler

Be Positive

One of the automatic features built into the Socred nervous system is the defensive reaction of blaming the NDP for everything. Be it social discontent, highest yment increase, commercial slump, labor unrest or personal hardship imposed on the people by harsh arbitrary policies, the buck is immediately passed on to their predecessors. This excuse, however, is getting a bit threadbare now. The front page comments made by a government member for Victoria in you paper does not carry much weight. I trust they will start doing something positive and constructive before it's too late. -

Thanks, Victoria

Firefighters

I am writing this letter to bring to the attention of the public the plight of the city's firefighters.

In past years the firefighters, in dealing with the city, have been forced to arbitra-tion 22 consecutive times. One of those years the city opened with an offer of minus six per cent. Imagine! Can this be called negotiating in good faith? Last year was a little different. The un-firefighters and told the city to pay. They agreed, then disagreed, forcing the firefighters to make a stand. What do they do? Stand and fight or lay down and take —

We have exhausted every means at our disposal to get our just and rightful award. What action is left? The last resort—strike. But why should the firefighters bear the burden of public ridicule brought upon them by these avoidable incidents? Let us put the blame where it belongs, on the elected representatives of the people, who are turning away from their responsibilities for whatever pomp and egotistical reasons; and leaving the city taxpayers in the lurch, without full and effective fire protection. — Urban Allen, Victoria Fire Department.

Marijuana

Your editorial, Criminal Relativity (Jan.), explains: "Until the 1930s marijuana wasn't illegal in Canada. Then, in typical bureaucratic ignorance, this mild euphoric was lumped with heroin, morphine and far more addictive dangerous drugs ... 'you continue to truthfully state: "The result: Thousands of young Canadians received criminal records and harsh jail terms. That, too, has changed, and while possession of mari-juana in small quantities brings a fine, it rarely results in jail or a criminal record any more. The law adjusts to reality in

While it is true that after spending a fortune in the preparation and publication of the Report of the Commission of Inquiry into the Non-Medical Use of Drugs, one Liberal member of parliament, Ray Per-rault, did author a bill to remove marijuana from the Narcotics Act and place it, ion membership, convinced that the city's more deservedly, under the food and drug position was to take a firm stand, and also authority and somewhat temper the more deservedly, under the food and drug ridiculously harsh jail terms. They maintained the settlement was outside the AIB guidelines and took it upon themselves to maintain a thousand a mandatory minimum of at least seven years in prison. (Section 423 of the Criminal Code of Canada). Although some themselves to make the judgment.

Next, the city, the firefighters and an AIB representative, met to clarify the AIB policies. The result of that meeting was that the board found in favor of the results of the control of the contro

When Weeks tried to borrow money from friends — apparently to buy more stock — those same acquaintances grew alarmed and turned him into his own government

The puzzle of it all is why Premier Bill Bennett persisted so long with Weeks, who has had a chequered career and was once before supposedly fired by Bennett himself. A Word, Or Two, For Commas

Like the placement of milady's beauty mark, or buggy whip snapping, the traditional, proper use of commas may soon become a lost art. Year-end figures for 1976, soon to be released by the National Comma Counters Society (N,C,C,S,) will show that both total usage and distribution patterns have fallen to dangerous, new, low levels. At present, mas, and the N.C.C.S. itself is strangely

Conversely wherever the observant eye wanders, practitioners of the New School of Sentence Construction (NSSC) are taking control. Dash marks and parentheses are now breaking up most long sentences, the sentences once controlled, almost exclusively, by commas. The semicolon people have also become

What alarms me most is this stylistic business of short, infectious, fragmentary sentences. Very popular. Very destruc tive. And, of course, no commas, None The uninhibited NSSC style is succeeding on a scale that boggles the minds of disgruntled N,C,C,S, members.

Investigative reporting is not exactly my strong suit, yet I can and will blow the whistle on certain dedicated NSSC'ers. Jimmy Breslin and Saul Bellow are high among the worst offenders. Russell Baker, less consistently, is another of these grammatical saboteurs whose gamey, fractionated sentences have made mockery of the comma's classical function.

In fact, Mr. Baker's recent article unicate!" in The Times Magazine is Exhibit A in the case against covert comma putdownism. Exercising his disarming, genteel way with words, Mr. Baker likened Jimmy Carter to a question mark, called Gerald Ford a period, described Senator-elect Moynihan as an exclamation mark and Senator-defunct Buckley as a semicolon. Notice, please, that no one was characterized as a comma. A token honor such as this might, deservedly, have gone to Hubert Humphrey, he whose famed gift for elongated clause-clustered sentences comma counters everywhere.

Where is it written that a few dinky little commas, more or less, don't really matter? I stand with those who say that commas are essential to almost any good clause. I ask all readers of the Book Review, syntax lovers and sloughers alike, to join with me in helping to reestablish a high comma count in sentences of the places won't do this job for us. Throughout three national TV debates, for example, neither presidential candidate was willing to say one lousy word about commas, or how they would be handled in the next administration.

Despoilers of a language tend to come in bunches. When one succeeds, others begin whittling away madly, always chanting "Less is more." Finally, there is no structure, no standards, no quality con-

Given this condition, every man is his own master spokesman, his own ghost writer, authority, expert, for communica-tion has then reached the level of which Humpty Dumpty spoke so fondly, "When I use a word, it means just what I choose it to mean, neither more, nor less.'

A decline in the national comma count, consequently, does indicate that the United States is now on the way to becoming a nation of Humpty Dumpties. Since this is a fate to be devoutly avoided, one New Year's resolution we should all make together is to show more tender, loving care for the commas in our precious sentences. My own resolution has included the following foreword:

The comma, as defined by Webster's

New World Dictionary, is a mark of punctuation, useful in indicating a slight separation of sentence elements, non-restrictive or parenthetical phrases, items in a series, quotations, etc., or simply a slight pause, but to me it is also the most ingenious device ever invented to mimic the human voice rhythms, improve the writing of writers, or help readers to read, while often dividing the teaching of teachers into squabbling groups of comma and some with a cool, comme ci, comme business of comma dropping, even though printers, proofreaders and editors, among others who have never given commas a word of praise, recognition, or encouragement, would quickly go stark, raving bananas without these versatile, ubiquitous, little separators to make sense out of senseless, convoluted sentence constructions, a practice especially disturbing to public speakers, TV news commenwhom don't write their own scripts, yet all of whom are dependent on using well constructed, colloquial language, natural in its flow, helpfully punctuated by pauses and other simulated voice inflections, sensitive to the words, phrases, idoms of constructive, conversation, though not ash everyday conversation, though not sub-standard or illiterate, unless intentionalportrayal, or in direct quotation of a third saving, if you know the rules you can break them, respectfully, and, if you don't know the rules you would be wise, indeed, to start boning up on them, say, through immersing yourself in some scholarly volume, such as that masterpiece of H. L. Mencken's, "The American Language or maybe a more recent book, the one with the title I never can remember, by Edwin Newman, not because either of these learned gentlemen have much to say about commas, but because they do use them so

To Jump

Montreal (CP) — Newsprint consumption in North America will increase four to five per cent this year, the sharpest jump since 1972, the chairman of the Abitibi Paper Co said Wednesday.

Thomas Bell told the Montreal Society of Financial Analysts that Canadian companies would not benefit fully from the expected increase in demand because of recent additions to productive capacity in the United States.

He said he expected a net gain of two per cent in Canadian mill operating rates this year with the average rate standing at 87 to 88 per cent of capacity by the end of 1977.

DENTISTS PRICES?

WASHINGTON (AP) - The U.S. Federal Trade Commission (FTC) accused the American Dental Association (ADA) today with price fixing and other unlawful practices that allegedly prevent pa-tients from benefitting from competition.

The commission said *that ethical codes observed by the ADA and its local chapters violate federal anti-trust law by barring advertising and by preventing price competition.

The FTC said the dental group, through its professional codes, "has eliminated competition among dentists in the United States."

The 124,000-member ADA, based in Chicago, denied any wrongdoing. "The ADA has neither fostered any practices nor engaged in any conduct relating to its advertising ethics which is in violation of the Federal Trade Commis-sion Act," the association said

Bayi Won't Leave Home If New Zealanders Run

DAR ES SALAAM (Reuter)

Tanzania's world 1,500
metres record holder, Filbert
Bayi, will not leave for track meets in Canada and the United States next month until the organizers send confirmation that New Zealanders are not taking part, officials said Thursday.

Bayi is due to take part in five indoor meets in North America—including the Toronto Star-Maple Leaf Indoor Games in Toronto on Feb. 11—and is ready to leave here Jan 25 here Jan. 25.

But Adam Mkude, assistant secretary of Tanzanian Ama-teur Athletic Association (TAAA), said: "When we re-ceived the invitations, we wrote back saying our partici-participation of New Zealanders.

"We won't be going until we receive confirmation that New Zealanders are not participating."

Tanzania led an Afro-Arab boycott of the Montreal Olympics because of sporting links between New Zealand and South Africa, and has since refused to consider competing in events with New Zealanders.

This has meant an eagerly awaited clash between Bayi and New Zealander John Walker, Olympic 1,500 metres champion and world mile record holder, has never taken place.

Walker and compatriots Rod Dixon and Dick Quax are scheduled to compete at the Toronto meet although Walker is still considered doubtful while still recovering in events with New Zealanders.

Sweeping Changes For U.S. Sports

special White House Olympics commission advocated Thursday that a powerful but nongovernmental central sports organization be created and U.S. amateurs be allowed to take money for endorsements and any other activities ex-

These were the most revolu-tion ary recommendations among a series of wide-rang-ing proposals in a final report of the president's commission on Olympic sports submitted to President Ford and Presi-dent-elect Jimmy Carter.

The suggested new Central Sports Organization would supplant the U.S. Olympic Commission as the national supervisory body for competition at the Olympic Games and would dilute control of amateur athletics by the AAU and the NCAA.

The recommendation to allow payments to U.S. athletes without costing them their eligibility was contained in a section on amateurism. The report, unveiled at news conferences in New York and Los Angeles, declared: "The commission believes that an amateur athlete should be able to accept all sports-related revenues except, those offered for competition itself."

The 22-member commission, which included such former Olympic stars as Micki King Hogue, Donna de Varona, Rafer Johnson, Bill Toomey, Ernest Vanderweghe and Willye White, conducted a two-year study of the feud-ridden U.S. amateur situation at the behest of Ford.

The 600-page report, including hearings on each of 30 Olympic competitive sports, said: "In international sport... American performances are deteriorating. Against athletes from nations for whom Olympic medals are as precious as moon rocks. as precious as moon rocks, U.S. competitors seem to have steadily diminishing chances of success."

The panel, headed by Gerald B. Zornow, chairman of the board of Eastmanof the board of Eastman-Kodak, urged an array of gov-ernment and private en-terprise programs to get the United States on a winning track for the upcoming 1980 winter and summer Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y., and

These included:

• A system of sport-bysport national governing bodies, representative of everything from luge to basketball which would provide the underpinning of the Centhe underpinning of the Central Sports Organization. The report said "autonomy for each sport is the intent of the commission, based on the premise that wrestlers can best decide what is good for wrestling, track and field participants for track and field."

Buffalo Clock Shows A Time to Criticize

New York Rangers lost the National Hockey League's version of Beat the Clock on Thursday night, and John Fenguson and Jean-Guy Tal-bot were far from gracious in defeat

Ferguson, general manager and coach of the Rangers, was so upset he refused to meet with reporters following his team's 7-5 loss to Buffalo

And Talbot, the Rangers assistant coach, had nothing but contempt for the penalty time clock at Buffalo's Memorial

"Our problems started right from the beginning with that damn clock they have here," Talbot said. "That clock gave them their first goal.

"Then Buffalo ices the puck in the last minute and the officials don't call it. Then they score a goal. The officials should have been wearing blue and white uniforms (the Sabres' colors)."

The penalty clock began malfunctioning while Gilbert Perreault was in the penalty box for slashing. It showed 13 seconds of his penalty remaining when he scooted out of the box, grabbed a loose puck and scored on a breakaway.

scored on a breakaway.

"I don't question that he didn't come out of the box at the right time," Talbot said.

"It's just that you coach by the clock and there was still time on the penalty when he scored."

In the World Hockey Association, Cincinnati Stingers beat

San Diego Mariners 7-2 and Indianapolis Ravers downed New England Whalers 4-1.

The Rangers rallied in the third period to deadlock the game at 5-5, but Buffalo's Gary McAdam scored with 1:36 to put the game away. Craig Ramsey closed out the scoring with a goal into an empty net with three seconds left.

Earl Anderson, who sat out most of last season with a leg injury, scored his sixth goal in 12 games early in the third period to give the Bruins their win over Los Angeles. Who knows what the repercussions might be from that modest announcement in Thursday's throne speech, concerning free use of provincial campsites for senior citizens?

Perhaps it's just the shot-in-the-arm which elderly British Columbians need, to get them out of their armchairs and into the great outdoors. Maybe it's the dawn of a Golden Age of Adventure in this province.

They'll besiege the camping goods stores demanding "customized" items such as sleeping bags with built-in hot water bottles, and alpenstocks that will double as walking sticks. And the campsites will be so crammed with senior citizens the rest of us just won't have a look-in.

In these times of tight money and rising costs, most of us make at least a token attempt to save a dollar here or there. But Sidney RCMP suggest we don't try the same stunt two youths undertook at the Swartz Bay ferry terminal.

If the Socred MLA can propose last-minute changes to a regional bylaw, then the regional board and the provincial civil service should be able to propose changes to the changes . . and so on.

This benumbing issue arose at the regional board meeting this week when Campbell laid the wood to Kahl for insisting on his own 11th hour review of the region's proposed zoning bylaw for Sooke, thus delay-ing cabinet approval by almost another month.

Campbell noted the regional bylaw had gone to the provincial government for approval last June and the region hoped for a quick yes because of certain kinds of undesirable

Watch Out for 'Easy-Play' Gimmicks

Sales in home organs have increased in the past five or six years because of the appeal to the family market.

A Toronto organ dealer said that "people buy organs to fill a family entertainment need. Unlike a piano, where one person spends months and months learning alone, the entire families are the second to the second that t tire family can become involved with the organ. People seem to be getting tired of TV and the other mediums and are looking for self gratifica-

There are a variety of organs on the market from which to choose.

The major difference is the size — the number of keyboards and pedals.

The least-expensive chord organs, range in price from $39 to $1,400.

But be wary of these features, advises an instructor at the Ontario Conservatory of Music. He feels that unlike selecting a piano, most organ sales are geared to the impulse buyer. The person is convinced that he can play with one finger and lessons are then offered as an inducement to buy. "When the person gets home he doesn't know anything. These people are the biggest offenders in the music industry. The customers are taught no theory. tomers are taught no theory

Once again the fascinating study of interior decorating will be introduced to you by theoretical and practical analysis. These lectures will be held in the store and also supplemented by on location studies in selected homes including a visit to the residence of Mr. Egoyan to discuss the problems arising in furfiture arrangement, color schemes, lighting, styles, theme, drapery and carpet selection, and proper use of pictures and accessives.

Mr. Joseph Egoyan, B.A. E.D., your instructor, is well qualified with extensive theoretical and practical knowledge. He is a graduate from the Art Institute of Chicago and the California College of Arts and Crafts; has taught at Oakland Tech. High Calif., the American College in Cairo and the Evening Adult Education program in Victoria. In addition, he has a wealth of practical experience in retail field as proprietor of Ego Arts Gallery in Cairo for five years, and Ego Interiors in Victoria for fifteen years, Mr. Egoyan is a qualified artist and has exhibited his art works in a number of one-man shows in the U.A.R. and U.S.A. He won first prize in Vancouver Island Jury Show at the Art Gallery of Victoria, also a one-man show theme "BIRDS" was displayed at The Victoria Provincial Museum, The Burnaby Art Gallery and is now at Ego Interiors.

For the past twelve years this course in interior decorating has been given by Mr. Egoyan twice yearly in three separate classes each week. At an average of twenty students in each class, almost a thousand students have taken the course to date.

THE CLASSES WILL BE HELD TUESDAY AFTERNOONS-FROM 1 TO 2:30 P.M. AND ALSO EVENINGS ON MONDAY OR WEDNESDAY, 7:30 TO 9 P.M.

CLASSES START FEB. 21st, 22nd, OR 23rd AT EGO INTERIORS. TOTAL COST OF SIX LECTURES ONCE A WEEK, $20.00.

I told him I didn't think this was normal. He said nothing happened between them, and I had a dirty mind.

Even today, every time they meet she kisses him on the lips. She is still unmarried, and if anyone asks her how come, she says, "Because I've never met anybody as wonderful as my brother."

Abby, I think my sisterinlaw is in love with her brother. Is that possible, or am I jealous for no reason? I suppose I should mention that if it weren't for the strange relationship between these two, my husband would be a perfect husband.

What are your thoughts on the veekends, but I always wind up going home with the girls I came with.

The men stare, but they never ask me to dance. Why is it that men don't ask nicelooking girls to dance, Abby? Are they afraid we may think they aren't good enough for us?

"I'm sure other girls wonder about this, too. Can you help us? — PRETITY: Being pretty has never been a disadvantage, so there must be another reason. How's your attitude? Do you act superior? Or

What are your thoughts on this? — ANONYMOUS.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's DEAR ANONYMOUS: It's possible that your sister-in-law is "in love" with her brother, but you say he is otherwise a perfect husband, so it's obvious that he isn't in love with her. I agree that it was highly irregular for a brother and sister of their ages to be sleeping together, but it is possible that nothing happened. Forget it.

Sore Throats Need Careful Treatment

New York Times

NEW YORK - Sore throat, one of the most common plagues of man (especially during cold weather), is also one of the most frequently mistreated ailments. A sore throat is not a disease but a symptom. In the to near you.

Any one of the following circumstances warrant a prompt call to a physician: If the sore throat is severe or has lasted longer than a week: if it is accompanied by a cough, hoarseness, difficulty in breathing or a temperature over 100 degrees Fahrenheit: is the only cure.

Lest a sore throat with a serious and treatable cause be overlooked, it is important to know when to consult a doctor

These circumstances do not necessarily mean that the sore throat is caused by a serious illness, but they could be a sign of a condition that warrants medical atten-

The most common serious cause of sore throat, particularly in children, is an infection by the bacterium beta hemolytic streptococcus, or "strep" for short. Unlike viral sore throats, strep throat can be cured by appropriate anti-biotic therapy and, also unlike a virus infection, failure to treat strep throat adequately can sometimes lead to rheu-matic fever and permanent damage to the heart or kid-

A diagnosis of strep throat should be based on a throat culture — a swab of the throat that is smeared on a special laboratry dish

tute clinician is likely to be wrong half the time trying to diagnose a strep throat without a culture, and in some cases the culture may be negative but the physician, on the basis of his examination, has strong reason to suspect strep as the cause.

If the diagnosis is strep, it If the diagnosis is strep, it should be treated with 10 days of penicillin, or a suitable alternative (not tetracycline or sulfa drugs) in the case of penicillin allergy. The penicillin may be administered as a single injection that is effective for 10 days, or oral capsules or liquid may be used if the patient, will reliably take them for the 10-day schedule.

It is crucial not to stop taking the antibiotic when the symptoms disappear, but to continue the therapy, as pre-scribed, for the entire 10 days. A repeat culture is ad-visable after therapy is completed, to be sure the infec-tion has cleared.

Doctors often recommend that young children who are in close contact with a patient with strep should also have a throat culture. Some pre-scribe penicillin for five days as a preventative for such-contacts even before an infec-

Most sore throats are minor, uncomplicated viral infections (usually a part of the common cold) that clear up within five days without specific treatment. Whereas the symptoms of strep tend to come on suddenly, viral sore throats, usually start slowly. throats usually start slowly, often as a feverish feeling, with headache, loss of appetite, runny nose and dry cough as accompaniments.

One viral sore throat that may be confused with strep is known as herpangina, a rather common summertime illness in children. Temperatures may soar to 105 de-grees F. Meanwhile, in Juneau, Alaska, U.S. Coast Guard and oil industry officials balked Thursday at a proposal to require trial runs through the Valdez narrows for all pilots who will guide tankers in and out of the trans-Alaska oil pipeline terminal.

The oil industry has agreed to send a 120,000-ton tanker to Alaska in April for pilot training, but industry officials told a tanker safety conference that it would be too expensive to require all pilots to take the vessel through the danger-

Drivers Caught By Sudden Stop

Oak Bay council traffic department are trying to solve the problem of the sudden stop on Cadboro Bay

Insp. Jack Groves said today there had been a number of complaints by motorists about new automatic traffic signals at Cadboro Bay and Bee Street, which is only about 300 feet east of the traffic lights at Foul Bay.

"People heading east who have just driven through a green light at Foul Bay, aren't expecting a red light so soon," Groves said.

Electricians, police and the traffic committee are working on the problem, which elsewhere has been remedied by synchronizing the signal phases at both intersections.

Removal of a delayed left-turn light for west-bound traf-fic at Foul Bay last month drew a complaint to traffic committee from F. Mildred Lawson, 2544 Heron, who wanted it restored.

Groves said the light had been responsible for more than three-quarters of the ac-cidents occurring at that in-tersection, and noted Victoria had done away with this type

A man who said he was cut off from welfare last February told B.C. Supreme Court Thursday he owned Mac-Millan Bloedel.

Fred Anderson was testifying in the second day of hearing into the company's application for an injunction to prevent five persons from squatting on a small part of MacMillan Bloedel's land holdings in the Shawnigan Lake area.

Anderson said a box of papers "to show my ownership of MacMillan Bloedel" had gone missing.

"In all fairness, I own the company," he said.

Anderson said his father and "Mr. Bloedel" came from Washington state in 1906 and n e g o t l a t e d with Premier McBride for cutting rights on Vancouver Island.

"That's hearsay. It doesn't prove ownership," Mr. Justice J. G. Ruttan said.

Anderson continued that his father walked around Vancouver Island and claimed all the timber and was in partnership with Bloedel.

He said it took his father three years to walk round the Island and he negotiated with and Richard Houle.

Action against a sixth person, Richard Harvey Moore, was discontinued Wednesday, but the matter of costs remained to be settled. Indians for an agreement cov-ering "dead and down" timber only, But Bloedel took in two partners, Stewart and Welch, and they began steam log-ging, which his father op-posed, saying it would devas-tate the land.

The judge said this was a "very interesting" story historically, "if factual," but it was "completely irrelevant" and "pure hearsay." He noted that MacMillan Bloedel had entered a land registry certificate saying the land belonged to the company.

anderson said he had a mineral claim on the property hear Wild Deer Creek, 10 miles south of Duncan and nine miles west of the north end of Shawnigan Lake, which was cancelled by the cabinet in October, 1973.

He complained about it and

At the end of the second day of the hearing, Fred Anderson, who has been defending himself, told Ruttan he wanted Victoria lawyer Douglas Christie to represent him. An adjournment until today was granted by the judge to see if Anderson could get Christie to Anderson could get Christie to represent him.

Concluding his story about MacMillan Bloedel history, Anderson said compounding interest over the years would increase his father's half ownership with Bloedel to full ownership.

"I've prospected. I found what I feel is a very rich silver deposit, in 1971."

in October, 1973.

He complained about it and was told the reason was that he hadn't found any minerals in the first year of operation.

But, he said, there was bly cancelled."

He said he learned in July that his mining claim had been cancelled in 1973, although in the fall of 1975 "I learned my claim was probably cancelled."

He also said some of his belongings, moved at one time by company employees, had disappeared.

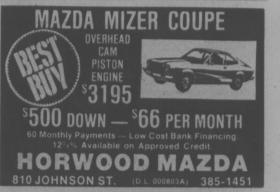

wasn't until 1975 that the Min-eral Act was changed to allow cancellation of a claim if no Moore, who said he existed on welfare, said he intended to return to the area in the Asked by MacMillan Bloedel lawyer David Williams if he had done any mining in the six years he had lived on the property, Anderson said, spring to reactivate his min-eral claim.

Anderson said he intended to restake his claim.

California Drought Possible

· SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The state's top water official says California could be headed for its worst drought year on record in 1977 unless it gets some "substantial storms" soon.

Water resources director Ronald B. Robie told the assembly water committee that California needs 80 per cent of normal rainfall this year to "take us out of the woods." However, he said there is only one chance in 10 that California will receive that much rain.

"But we're looking to the point now where 50 per cent would be a pretty good deal,"

he said. Scripps Institute of Oceanography in LaJolla projects less than 50 per cent supplies for the rest of the year, Robie said. He described the situation as "pretty grim."

Guerrilla Groups Threaten New Warfare in Angola

DAVID SMITH Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Guerrilla groups opposed to the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola, which won that country's civil war, are still creating chaos in the countryside that may presage a new round of warfare.

The pro-Western insurgents have cut coffee production by 80 per cent, caused slow-downs and strikes in the cities and sabotaged industrial production, halted the Benguela railway and confined the Cuban troops in Cabinda, Angola's oil enclaye, to the progola's oil enclave, to the pro-vincial capital and the oil in-

The guerrilla groups recently met quietly in Kinshasa, capital of neighboring Zaire, to co-ordinate their efforts aginst the Popular Movement's government.

The mid-December meeting did not result in a common front, although Holden Roberfront, although Holden Roberto—h e a d of the National Front for the Liberation of Angola, a rival of Agostinho Neto's Popular Movement—often seems to be trying to give the impression that he speaks for other groups as well as his own.

The fact that the meeting was held in Kinshasa also inevitably raised speculation that Zaire's President Mobutu Sese Seko, who apparently

Jonas Savimbi, head of UNITA (the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola), the Popular Movement's other principal civil war rival, is known to have felt that Mobutu was trying to promote Roberto to a central position in the Angolan opposition

Savimbi's caution about forging new alliances or reacforging new alliances or reactivating old ones was reportedly the main reason that no formal common front was reached. According to European diplomatic sources, Savimbi refused Roberto's proposal that they announce the formation of a government in exile and the opening of a united front in northern Angola.

For intance, the resistance groups in Cabinda have tied up one-fifth of the government's Cuban allies, who are tecting the installations of Cabinda Gulf, a subsidiary of the Gulf Oil Corp.

None of the opposition groups appears to be getting any substantial direct backing from outside governments, but all seem to receive some amount of such non-military support as food and clothing from governments and hu-manitarian groups. They use this aid to sustain supporters various parts of the

The guerrillas are being aided by villagers who refuse to co-operate with the Neto government, diplomatic sources say, and draw on cap-tured weapons and hidden caches of arms received dur-

Perhaps most surprising of the guerrillas' successes has been the effectiveness of Hol-den Roberto's National Front in the north. One European diplomat said, "They're fight-

National Front guerrillas have concentrated largely on hit-and-run attacks on military converse and small outroots of convoys and small outposts of Cuban and government sol-

Grow Seedlings in Greenhouse

Seed sowing of some summer annuals in the last week of January is a great advantage if a slightly heated greenhouse is put to use.

Day length and height of the sun during bright days are in favor of strong seedlings, and the amount of heating is minimal if bolstered by knowledgeable care. Night heating requirements Night heating requirements depend on prevailing night temperatures. A minimum of 4 deg. C. is needed with a maximum of 7 deg. C. A few degrees higher at night causes weakness in early stages of seedling growth. Protection from lowered temperature during a night of sudden sharp drop or when an unusually cold wind develps can be anticipated by shielding seed boxes, and later the seedling flats, with sections of newspaper. These must be removed at daybreak prevent poor growth of

Two popular annuals very slow in their young stages of growth are lobelia and snapdragons. So are petunias, but I found under our coolhouse conditions they did better when sown in February with stronger light and warmer daytime temperatures.

Snapdragons are notoriously slow starters — not in germinating but in early seedling stage. The flowering value of the plants is well worth the care needed to raise them by a late January start.

When making a selection of seeds, first decide on where the plants are to grow and flower. Snaps come in all sizezs from six to 36 inches in height, in many shades of all colors excepting blbue. There that private enterprise might do something to help."

He said he was "deeply sus-picious" that the Crown corporation of Ocean Falls might be forced to curtail its activities in order to open some additional markets for the private sector.

Barrett thought a line in the speech about the province wanting to encourage outsiders to bring in money is an indication the government intends to abolish succession duties, the taxes paid when an estate is passed on from one person to another.

Succession duty and gift tax bring in $25 million a year in revenue, Barrett said, and any removal of those duties would be "tax relief for the super-wealthy."

Jack Armstrong, president of the Canadian Textile Institute, held up men's and women's underpants of varying styles and patterns to illustrate the point that imports were hurting Canadian underwear makers.

Women's panties made in Hong Kong are selling in Canadia for between 69 and 79 cents a pair, while similar products made in Canadia sold for between $1.09 and $1.19, Mr. Armstrong said.

A representative of the Canadian underwear industry, Roland Meeks of Harvey Woods Ltd., said that if the current level of imports continues producers would suffer and workers could be left jobless. 42% and workers country less.

He suggested that the government keep a closer watch

Best and Worst of '76's Commercials

By TOM SHALES

NEW YORK — By now we all know that "clean is sexy," that "Orange Plus tastes closer to fresh than beep-beep," and that "being first" is "the only thing." But what these and countless other TV commercials really tried to sell us in 1976 was not just a product; if cials really thed to seil us in 1976 was not just a product; it was ourselves. That's what they were selling and that's what many of us were buying.

TV commercials didn't get much better or worse in form during 1976. They hammered away at old obsessions—usually the cleanliness of usually the cleanliness of orifices — and they explored a

And commercial producers employed the relatively new-found "hidden camera," honest-injun, common person technique so often that a day without a hidden camera began to feel like a day without Anita Bryant.

But the overriding theme was Youism, or what writer Tom Wolfe called Me-ism. Commercial after commercial told us we were swell and worthy, that those days of selfdenial brought on by eco hardship were over, that each and deserves every comfort, luxury and appearanceimprover that money or credit to strange men in laundromats herself into our passive concan buy. Increasingly, commercials spoofed commercials. Toyota's amusing "You asked for it, you got it" spots satirize the presto-change editing that sage of commercials did or did not vary, the ways in which it If you really love yoursell, after all, you don't just meditate and go through EST and discover you're your own best friend and examine every lest nook and crevice of your However the central message of commercials did or did

But by almost any standard, the Burger King "American Loves Burgers" spot, with its 22 warming finin-vignettes of life-loving, hamburger-gulping Americans, was one of the best commercials of 1976. The new L'Eggs commercials, in which mommies are embarrassed in front of their daughters because of baggy panty hose, can be seen as lampooning the humiliation ploy of Wisk's "ring around the collar" ads, yet the threat of humiliation is established nevertheless.

It was also reliably reported that Mason Reese will soon return in a new series of com-mercials for Dunkin' Donuts. At last.

bathrobed wife sprinkled talcum on her hubbie's hairy chest — and in the bedroom, yet! Ooh, la-la!

Many ads celebrated The Good Life, the life we all so richly deserve, and sometimes it, was put over in pleasurable if not convincing ways. IBM and Xerox institutional spots always give one the impression there is great hope for humanity, and the oil com-panies are awfully clever about making themselves ecological

Poshness and elegance are being extolled again; veteran boite balladeer Bobby Snort sings a song for "Charlie" perfume. Luxury car advertising is up, and some auto makers are telling us we should spare ourselves nothing in selecting an old-fashioned, big fat, conspicuous-consumption car. Sometimes the good life gets pretty hilarious. "Now Comes Miller Time" was a cornball pretty hilarious. "Now Comes Miller Time" was a cornball appeal to armchair machismo, depicting the typical beer-drinker as a beefy, globe-trotting combination of Evel Knievel and The Sea Hawk. A source of even more rarefied howlers is the Inglebrook campaign, in which life's great mo-ments cannot be allowed to pass without a swig of wine.

The intended humor in commercials is often less humorous than the accidental. Flicking Bic's has long since ceased to be a giggle, and the Schlitz Malt Liquor Bull was never anything but embarrass-Margarine series continues to demean ethnics one at a time by portraying them as wildly risible nincompoops, and the contrived crunch-matches un-derwritten by Doritos corn chips are anything but clever.

Appeals to fear, insecurity and self-doubt continue in commercial after commercial, but the pragmatic positivism of you-and-wonderful-you re-mains the dominant theme as we begin another year of Madison Avenue Madness.

Claims and counterclaims for various products fly through the airwaves, with Datril and Tylenol battling it out in one corner and Pepsi-Cola and Coca-Cola tussling in Fortunately we all know in our hearts that the wisest approach is to believe nobody's assertion of anything in a TV commercial except for the part about us. We, we're the one. We must be great or they wouldn't be spending so much money to tell us so.

IN MOST WELCOME category were Dick Cavett (left) and Milton Berle, along with O. J. Simpson and the "born again" Mister Peanut.

"I really feel for those people. I feel for them greatly," says Chuck Barris, 47, whose stage.

"Almost live" from Hollywood, it's "The Gong Show" a merciless variation on the old Amateur Hour and a bedazzling fantasia in humiliation that has become the most talked-about program on daytime television, and has spawned a nighttime version.

"The Gong Show" is loud, shameless and vulgar, but it's not like any other game show on the air. People make fools of themselves, but not for Amana freezers. They do it for the inon the air. People make fools of themselves, but not for Amana freezers. They do it for the incomparable thrill of fleeting fame. "The Gong Show" is dedicated to the proposition that people will do almost anything to get on television. Part blue-collar "Chorus Line," part sideshow, part Christian dinner for hungry lions, "Gong" is like "Talent Scouts" without the talent, where worse is more and the show when the slick an show people love to hate to watch, or hate to love to watch,

Actually, "The Gong Show" is probably less demeaning to its participants than game shows that require shricking and groveling for a Mr. Coffee machine or a trip to Puerto Vallarta. It's also much more entertaining and sometimes, in some crazy show-biz way, mov-

Two of England's finest actors, Keith Mitchell and Geraldine McEwan, portray the Brownings. Mitchell, well-known for his interpretation of Henry VIII in the series The Six Wives of Henry VIII, first depicted Browning in the stage musical, "Robert and Elizabeth" in London. He sees the Brownings' relationship as "a marriage of minds and an attraction of opposites. She was dark in her outlook on life and spent much of her life shut in her room. He was a great country lover, and loved society and parties."

Geraldine McEwan portray the annual awards and entertainment special honors entertainers in 11 categories, singles out one performer as the "Entertainer of the Year" and presents a special "Golden Award" to a performer who has devoted a lifetime to the entertainment of the American public.

This "Aimante Magnetic Bracelet" Can Help You!!!

AIMANTE MAGNETIC HEALTH BAND

Doctors say "It helps!" During testing at four major hospitals in Japan significant results were shown. It was found to relieve the symptoms of common ailments such as "Rheumatic pains, headache, neuralgia, nervous tension, poor blood circulation, insomnia, constipation, muscle and joint stiffness." The Magnetic Bracelet has been developed by the Department of Internal Medicine at the Isuzu Hospital (patent No. 488621) and approved by the Japanese Department of Health and Welfare. These results were also submitted to the Canadian Health and Welfare Department. The Almante Magnetic Bracelet has won a good reputation not only as a Medical device, but also as an attractive piece of wrist jewelry among its users in 43 countries ever since its debut on the market in 1966.

THE EFFECT OF MAGNETIC FIELD ON THE HUMAN BODY
In today's hectic world people tend to depend on drugs to cure internal problems rather than seek external help.
For example headaches, in many cases, are symptoms of eye problems and could be cured by seeing an eye specialist. Magneticism is a well-known form of external medicine. Magnetic rays produced by various magnets generate a weak current which runs through the body (Principle of Electromagnetic Flow Meters). These weak currents increase the quantity of lons and such ionized blood produces the healing effects. When a fluid in which salt is desolved (in this case the blood) comes in contact with the Magnetic field, the physical properties of the blood change (Principle of Magnetic Treatment Device of Liquids widely used in Physiotherapy in many hospitals). THE EFFECT OF MAGNETIC FIELD ON THE HUMAN BODY

Voyage of the Hokule'a

Centuries ago ancient Polynesians sailed thousands of miles across the Pacific in huge double-hulled sailing canoes. Theirs were incredible feats of navigation, for these early navigators sailed, guided not by instruments, but by the stars, ocean swells, and currents. Aboard they carried dried food, live plants and animals. One by one they settled the farflung islands of the Pacific and finally, Hawaii.

Now adventurous Hawaiians have created a dramatic reproduction of the voyaging canoe of their ancestors and have sailed her 3,000 miles across open ocean from Hawaii to Tahiti. She is called Hokule'a, "Star of Gladness," and her epic journey is the subject of the National Geographic.

Narrated and hosted by E.G. Marshall, Voyage of the Hokule'a, is the second in a new season of National Geographic

Record Reviews

JONI MITCHELL ... good, but too cerebral

By DAVE MARSH

JONI MITCHELL: "Hejira" (Asylum 7E-1087).

A Boston paper recently ran a review of this album under the headline: "Joni Mitchell to Fans: Drop Dead." Fortunately, Mitchell isn't coming up for re-election to anything, for this album is as deliberately inaccessible and cold as any she's made — which is as cold and inaccessible as anyone. On the other head, it recours much of the ground lost with last the other hand, it recoups much of the ground lost with last year's "The Hissing of Summer Lawns," both musically and lyrically. The focus is the road — the title refers to Mohammed's flight from Mecca — but not only as a means for esmed's flight from Mecca — but not only as a means for escape, it's for adventure, too. The singing is the most diverse she had done since "For the Roses," particularly on Side One, which has hints of standard pop melody. But in the end, this is a bit too cerebral for its own good.

THE EAGLES: "Hotel California" (Asylum 7E-1084).

I've never liked the Eagles very much, and Joe Walsh, their new lead guitarist, appeals even less. So I guess it figures that this is the group's best album. Surely, it is their toughest, with one song, "Victim of Love," the very model of what a California rock song can be. The rest descends rather too often for my taste into either California bar-fly country harmony or Walsh's own peculair conception of rock-blues. harmony or Walsh's own peculair conception of rock-blues. But I haven't stopped listening, which is a big plus for this band when it's on my turntable.

WAYNE JENNINGS: "Waylon Live" (RCA APLI-

The biggest advantage this record has is a really knowledgeable audience — they know enough to cheer when the name of Western swing-master Bob Wills is involved, at least. But there are other causes for Jennings' smartest album in some time: Without the sophistication of the studio, both his voice and his guitar have an edge that borders on pure rock and roll, and the material is among his finest: "Good Hearted Woman," "T for Texas," "Me and Paul," and the rather bizarre inclusion of "House of the Rising Sun" make this the finest country album I've heard all year.

RUPERT HOLMES: "Singles" (Epic PE 34288).
Holmes would like to be the Todd Rundgren of the mainstream: terrific producer, able songwriter, fine singer, dexterous instrumentalist. I don't think he's gonna make it. The songs here are excellent, particularly the title track and "The Last of the Romantics," but they are a bit too New York in their sensibility. And Holmes' sound is not as polished as he thinks — bland is more like it. Still, it is worth waiting for the next one — there's promise here.

MICHAEL BLOOMFIELD: "If You Love These Blues, Play 'em As. You Please" (Guitar Player/Takoma 3002).

Ostensibly an instruction record — there's even a booklet to show you the fingering of these numbers. But really, this is Bloomfield's warmest, most-focused recording ever. The explanations are quiet, instructive even to non-particle even t playing customers, and never intrude on the playing, which has the feel of real devotion. If YOU love the blues, almost a necessity.

"NBC's SATURDAY NIGHT LIVE" (Arista AL No. 4107).

This compilation is not the best of Saturday Night's often brilliantly verbal sketches — where is Lily Tomlin's telephone commercial, for instance? — but it gives a better sample of the program than might be expected. The exchange between Richard Pryor and Chevy Chase is almost worth five bucks by itself, even without Garrett Morris' legendary Fondue plea and John Belushi's brilliant Marlon Brando takeoffs. Brando takeoffs.

TELEWORD ANSWER: CONFLICT

Pat Barclay

An artist acquaintance, who hails from what is very possibly the smallest rural community in Alberta, once told me that when he moved to the big city he decided he needed to learn how to dance. "So I walked into the nearest Arthur Murray studio," he said, "and told them I wanted to be an instructor. Nothing to it. In three weeks I was the best damn dancer they'd ever had."

In his modest, retiring way, he was explaining the fun-

In his modest, retiring way, he was explaining the fun-damental truth that the best way to learn something is to teach it. I found this out myself in the early 60s, when I spent a year as a teaching assistant at the University of California

The best thing about Berkeley, in those days, was its proximity to San Francisco. As I could hardly ever afford to take advantage of this, however, I spent a lot of time learning things instead.

Some of the things I learned were: a) How to memorize some of the things I learned were: a) How to memorize-vast quantities of trivial facts and promptly forget them again, to make room for more; b) If the sharp operators with whom I shared an office were professional academic material then I, patently, was not; and c) The British and Canadian professional imports were much tougher than their American colleagues. (Well, Berkeley was a soul-toughening experience.) I also learned d) The freshman course in the little which I helped to teach English Lit, which I helped to teach.

Some of the hoops we made those poor kids jump through had to do with defining the world "culture." I won't bore you with many details, cosmically absorbing though they unquestionably are; I'll just point out that a certain "Theory of Mass Culture," as expounded by the U.S. writer and thinker Desight Massdaydis of some relevance to our situation in Dwight Macdonald, is of some relevance to our situation in There've been rumblings recently about the need for an indigenous popular culture in this country. Macdonald prefers the term "mass culture," because "its distinctive mark is that it is solely and directly an article for mass con-

The electric toothbrush and the skateboard, then, are as much a part of "mass" or "pop" culture as Snoopy, Cher or Dirty Harry. Because it is relatively cheap, mass produced, all-pervasive and easy to understand, mass culture threatens 'high culture," which can be expensive and difficult (if it is genuine art) and requires us to make the effort of dis-crimination. "Mass culture." says Macdonald, "scrambles everything together, producing what might be called homogenized culture . . . It thus destroys all values."

This dour definition could lead one to wonder whether the people who are calling for a distinctively Canadian pop culture have lost their massproduced marbles. Their point, though, is that our present pop culture is largely imported from the U.S. Our national identity is not undiscovered any more, it's mortally threatened. (Remember Mel Hurtig's high school survey?) The principal villain, of course and as usual, is TV. You can see this in the current CBC flurry to fight the alienation of Canadian viewers by "going pop." (It's even more noticeable on radio, where the objective seems to be to produce variations on the CBC's most popular show, As It Happens, for 24 hours a day. This is called formula program-

Happens, for 24 hours a day. This is called formula programming, and proves that the teachings of U.S. broadcasting have been absorbed by the brass as well as the public.)

The proper solution to the CBC's dilemma — namely, to expand the number of its networks a la the B.B.C — could be suicidal for the government bold enough to advocate it. In comparison, the supportive policies sought by Canadian book publishers seem ridiculously modest.

A recent newsletter titled Books of Our Own, after last fall's Toronto conference, lists some pertinent facts. "Less than four per cent of the 32 million paperbacks sold in 1973 were by Canadian authors," yet "90 per cent of the new titles released in Canada annually" came from Canadian-owned companies.

Without more access to the lucrative mass market, the Canadian-owned share of our book business will continue to decline. Legislation is sorely needed to improve our U.S.-dominated distribution system. It's also high time we stopped thinking of Canadian content quotas as censorship of //oreign products, and realized that quotas are actually the first step in the removal of the censorship against potential Canadian products which has been in effect in this country

There's big money in pop culture, which is why we've wound up with a fairly healthy high culture and a pop culture which largely belongs to somebody else. We need our own, if we want to remain Canadian. When and if we get it, that'll be time enough to start worrying about how to contain it.

The Truth Will Out

By WALTER YOUNG

The output from the mine of information that is the Mackenzie King papers — dare one call it the mother lode — continues unabated. Of the two most recent additions, Professor Neatby's book is the more conventional. It is a straightforward, scholarly biography dealing with King's life from dealing with King's life from 1932-1939.

The Ferns and Ostry book is a re-issue of a book first published in 1955. Its second appearance has occasioned a good deal of comment to the extent that one might even describe it as a minor cause celebre. The burden of most of the comment is that when Ferns and Ostry were writing the book the Liberal establishway in order to prevent a critical look at King's career; and when the book was published — and by a London publisher (ergo, the Grits had warned off Canadian publishers) — the academic community received it critically because in the fifties scholarship in Canada was genteel and characterized by a determination to avoid rocking the boat. They suggest as well that the book never received the circulation it deserved.

Dalton Camp has written at length in the Toronto Star describing how young Bernard Ostry was mistreated by the Dominion Archives staff, denied access to the King papers and generally roughed up by the Liberal hierarchy in

And Johar Meisel, a political scientist at Queen's University, has written a brief introduction to the new edition, in which he suggests that the less than enthusiastic feception of the book was indicative of the academic community's discrete forms. There is evidence, however, to demonstrate that the reviewers dealt with the book failty if critically. And it

The refusal of the King executors to grant access to the papers was not from malice, but a matter of policy. McGregor Dawson was working on the papers and they were, in fact, closed to the public — a point which Kaye Lamb, who was Dominion Archivist at the time, made in a recent address to the Van-Peter Newman, in a review couver Institute. Why Ferns in a recent Maclean's, suggests and Ostry should have been

The original edition was never hard to find — I remember seeing two dozen copies remaining in the SCM bookstore at the U of T — and it was included on reading lists at every university. Now, at least, it is available in paperback and is as it was — a pungent, loaded, but nevertheless a useful and very readable ac-count of King's career up to his election as Laurier's successor. If you've a passion for ac curacy, however, be sure to read Dawson, Neatby and the Pickersgill edition of the diaries as well.

These are bewildering times and it requires a deal of soul-searching and a willingness to reassess fundamental values in order to be an authentic person in today's rapidly changing

One questions what has happened to man's self-image, to morality and religion. Not too long ago man enjoyed a profound sense of identity, permanence and continuity; disturbing thoughts — one might say the poignancy of change — had little effect on his life.

Modern man, on the other hand, keenly experiences change and impermanence in his

This line of thought was triggered by reading The Greatest Thinkers, an individual selection by Edward de Bono of 30 minds that shaped our civilization.

That a book designed for popular consump tion should send one scurrying to one's shelves in search of answers to profound questions will come as no surprise to the more than 600 fortunate people who packed the Newcombe Auditorium on Nov. 10, 1975 to listen to Dr. de Bono lecture on creative and

To those who were unable to attend that lecture, and who are unacquainted with de Bono's work, perhaps I should provide a brief biography.

The Malta-born de Bono is one of the world's leading authorities on creativity, a freelance consultant to governments and corporations around the world, and founding director of Britain's Cognitive Research Trust. A Rhodes Scholar and the holder of the consultant of the property of the madeline psychology. three doctorates (in medicine, psycho and philosophy), he has taught at Oxford, Cambridge and Harvard and is currently working in the Department of Investigative Medicine at Cambridge University. He is also

De Bono's approach to teaching is unusual, deliberately designed to be provocative, so it follows that his choice of the greatest thinkers should include names which will provoke academic argument. Here is his Moses, Confucius, Plato, Aristotle, Euclid, Jesus, Augustine, Aquinas, Columbus, Machiavelli, Copernicus, Luther, Bacon, Descartes, Newton, Rousseau, Kant, Malthus, Clausewitz, Darwin, Marx, Clerk Maxwell, William James, Nietzsche, Pavlov, Freud, Einstein, Keynes, Wiener and Sartre.

Biographies of the thinkers have been written by outside contributors; de Bono supplies a lengthy introduction and, following each group of three thinkers, a scintillating mini-essay to draw the threads together.

De Bono's list contains many surprises, not the least of which is the scarcity of philosophers. Where are Pythagoras, Heraclitus, Socrates, Leibniz, Spinoza, Hegel, Russell and, above all, Wittgenstein? Philosophy and thinking are firmly wedded; how then can philosophers be divorced from a book wholly converned with thinkers? And if you exclude heavyweight philosophers how do you justify the inclusion of people like you justify the inclusion of people like Maithus and Keynes?

The explanation advanced by de Bono is that philosophy is very much an 'in-game' for 'in-players' with one philosopher's school of followers busily engaged in opposing the thinking of another philosopher and his followers, thus generating philosophical heat but precious little light — and the effect on society is slight. society is slight.

This disarmingly simplistic explanation is pretty lame because if you exclude philosophers in favor of thinkers with a more practical impact then where are Edward Jenner, Pasteur, Faraday, and even the Wright brothers. brothers?

And why include Confucius and exclude Mohammed? Is Martin Buber not worthy of inclusion? And why Sartre and not Kierkegaard, who was the first existen-

One can go on and on asking such questions and it's debatable whether any two readers of this book will agree on de Bono's more unusual choices. And as each of us musters his usual choices. And as each of us musters his arguments, following considerable research and a great deal of thinking, we will in all innocence be doing precisely what the devilishly sly de Bono intended us to do.

And to make sure we became embroiled in this controversy — at least so I assume — he included unlikely candidates such as Columbus (if he was a thinker then Contain included unlikely candidates such as Columbus (if he was a thinker then Captain Cook was an intellectual giant); Malthus, whose sole claim to fame was in focussing attention on something that became obvious once he had stated it — but about which nothing could be done; and Machiavelli, who would feel thoroughly at home today now that his ethic of "what you can get away with" is universally practiced.

De Bono admits that some of his selections were not profound thinkers — William James were not profound thinkers - William James and Nietzsche, for example. The former replaced semantic analysis by pragmatism; the latter declared God was dead and supermen would arise to restore man's moral supermen would arise to restore man's moral fibre. The supermen turned out to be Nazis!

Eventually, when the reader has ceased getting worked up over the selections, it becomes apparent that de Bono is solely interested in effects on society and that the men (why no women? Madame Curie? Barbara Ward?) he has chosen provided what he terms "("wijtch.noints") away from the traditional line of thinking.

After one has cooled down and accepted this reasoning, some of the odder choices become clear and one can re-read the book, as I did, with the attention it so richly deserves.

The biographies, all contributed by experts in appropriate fields, are informative and excellently written. De Bono's miniessays, in which he assesses the importance of each thinker's work, are brilliant examples of the clear, logical thinking of a man of outstanding intellect.

I am a lot better informed since reading
The Greatest Thinkers, and I shall be referring to it constantly. For the stimulation alone my thanks go to Edward de Bono, who is surely destined to be featured in some future book such as this.

THE GREATEST THINKERS, by Edward de Bono. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $17.95.

Cancer: No Need to Doom Our Chil

Cancer.

There is no word more frightening. Sooner or later, one out of four North Americans will be told they have contracted this dread disease. During the coming year, more than a million will commence treatment — treatment which, all too often, will prove of no avail. Meanwhile, year after year, the death-toll is steadily, inexoribly rising.

"Cancer," Dr. Ronald J. Glasser asserts in The Greatest Battle. "is today's plague, killing us and our children, our relatives and our friends, the way cholera, diptheria and smallpox once did. It is virtually epidemic." But unlike the great epidemics of the past, which struck in a rapid-fire chain-reaction with victim infecting victim, cancer is a private dying, slow and incommunicable. Its roots reach far back into its victims' life-history.

back into its victims' life-history. "The cancers we are seeing today did not begin yesterday or the day before, but twenty, thirty, and even forty years ago. Scientists now agree that most adult malignancies have their beginning in childhood, adolescence and early life, some even before birth." Toworrow's victims are marked already. However vigorous they appear, the small assassin is even now lurking within, waiting inexorably like a tiny time-bomb planted amidst the healthy normal cells of brain or

The vast majority of cancers are initiated by "carcinogenic" chemicals we ingest in the food we eat, the water we drink, the air we breathe. "Carcinogens," Glasser explains, "are cellular poisons. Taken in large amounts they so widely disrupt or destroy intracellular machinery that they cause cellular death in expense they let cells like but cause cellular death; in small amounts they let cells live but, by interfering with subcellular control mecha-

But the key to appreciating their subtly insidious threat lies in the fact that small doses of carcinogens do not induce cancer directly. Rather, they transform the cells they infiltrate, jolting them into a "premalignant" state. Premalig nant cells are not yet cancerous; they are merely cocked, ready to explode into malignancy whenever some alien influence presses the trigger. This "promoter" need not itself be carcinogenic — it might be a trivial irritant like ordinary household dust.

A carcinogen, then, is merely an "initiator" - in small doses apparently harmless, at least over the short run. But its long-term effects are cumulative and irreversible. No matter whether one is exposed to a large dose at once or to smaller ones over an extended period, the same total quantity will affect the same number of cells. And once a cell has turned premalignant, it stays that way - until at last it blossoms into overt

By JULIAN REID

Then the cancerous cell literally runs amok, madly breeding a host of equally malignant replicas of itself which take root in surrounding tissues and themselves begin to multiply. In time, a single malignant cell will infect the en-tire body. Our natural defences are helpless against it. Only when every renegade cell has been either killed or surgically excised — the goal of all treatment — can we breathe safe again . . . safe, that is, until another premalignant cell bursts into malignancy, and the whole deadly business starts over.

But our real antagonist is less the darkly insidious enemy within than the carcinogenic seed from which it springs—seed indiscriminately sown by Man himself. With good reason, the publisher compares The Greatest Battle to Rachel Carson's famous Silent Spring. For just as Miss Carson demonstrated that we were systematically poisoning our environment, so Dr. Glasser here demonstrates, with persuasive lucidity, that we are equally systematically engaged in poisoning ourselves.

There are, of course, some naturally-occuring carcinogens; but at least three-quarters of today's cancers are humanly induced. Industrial pollution, radioactive wastes, food additives, prescription and non-prescription drugs — all are rich in death-dealing chemicals. But deadliest of all is cigarette-smoke. In the U.S. alone, the collective medical bill for lung cancer is approaching a billion dollars annually
— a largely futile investment, for "a diagnosis of lung cancer in adults is essentially a diagnosis of death."

Today's cancer victims are paying the bill for the their children are destined to pay an equivalent price for the still more carcinogenic life-styles of more recent times. But what of the next generation?

With angry eloquence, Glasser confronts this question:
"For many of us, exposed for most of our lives, it may already be too late. But there is no reason why our children too should be doomed. There is still time to save them.

"The battle against the infectious diseases has largely been won. Today we are faced with an entirely different kind of plague, where the enemy is no longer bacteria or viruses but man. Yet the principle involved in this battle is the same eases - prevention.

"By simple elementary prevention, one cancer after another has already been eliminated, wiped from the earth as surely and completely as smallpox and cholera. Three different malignancies — bone cancer, thyroid malignancies and squamous-cell carcinoma of the skin — have all been conquered by the elimination of carcinogenic exposures, by simply not allowing ourselves to be poisoned.

"Today more than ever before, the price of health is vigilance, and his vigilance means that we must recognize not only the poisons in our environment but also the efforts on the part of industry to resist, in the name of profit, the removal of these carcinogens, as well as govern tolerance of these efforts."

Such warnings, of course, are nothing new — but neither were Rachel Carson's in Silent Spring. The importance of both books lies in their lucid exposition. Those who have a vested interest in maintaining our present carcinogenic life-style thrive on our ignorance and fright-ridden wishful thinking; we cannot prevail against their self-serving ob-fuscations unless we are armed with a well-informed understanding of what they are really up to, the truth they are so wilfully determined to hide.

By making this understanding freely available, Dr. Glasser has performed a vital public service — a service above all to our children and our children's children. For, if we act now, there is still time to preserve them from the last and most insidious of all plagues, the man-made scourge that crouches in secret, waiting to devour us silently from within.

They're Children Forever

Laurel and Hardy have long been acknowledged as the greatest comedy team the American cinema produced. They offered the classic comic juxtaposition of fat and thin, of brash bully and timid soul. Their comedies featured their funny bodies and faces, their childish and toolichly human reactions, their absolute foolishly human reactions, their absolute incompetence, and their ecstatic pleasure in chaos and destruction.

The basis of Laurel and Hardy's com-

The basis of Laurel and Hardy's comedy lay in the notion that their characters were never more than overgrown children, incapable of sensible, adult activity, but, and their comedy turns on this point, they always assume the opposite. Their movies consistently puncture their characters' illusions and pretensions to maturity — especially those of Ollie.

Stan and Ollie were helpless clowns—they couldn't move furniture (The Music they couldn't move furniture (The Music Box), they couldn't sell anything (Big Business), they were hopeless process servers (Bacon Grabbers), terrible drivers (Two Tars), and useless husbands (Sons of The Desert). But Ollie, at least, were sure in the his incomposition. never gave in to his incompetence. whatever was coming their way. Stan, on the other hand, had the sense to give in to trouble instantly. His first resort was to tears and howls of misery. It was a ploy that always got him some comfort.

Laurel and Hardy raised the physical situation-comedy beyond slapstick to a pinnacle of near, sometimes complete impossibility; but we were so captivated, so in tune with these brainless, optimistic clowns, that we were ready and anxious to suspend our disbellef.

John McCabe and Al Kilgore's illustrated compendium of Laurel and Hardy's films revitalizes and refines our memories of them. Through photographs, original scripts, and cutting continuities, the authors have reconstructed the 105 films that they made together from 1926 to 1950. In addition, they have collected personal recollections of "the boys" from such admirers as Danny Kaye, Jack Benny, Groucho Marx and Marcel Marceau, and included brief biographies of the two comics as well as a descriptive analysis of their most familiar comic devices and pontoming hits.

their most familiar comic devices and pantomine bits.

McCabe and Kilgore's study is an insightful one. Stan Laurel emerges as the genius of the two — full of ideas for gags, stunts and comic bits for the characters. Together, they were among the few comics to successfully bridge the transition from silent to sound film, and no screen comedians have ever made such subtle and brilliant use of sound and dialogue. They were masters of the comedy of accumulation—the art of building a series of gags into a comic crescendo.

MacCabe and Kilgore's book serves, in MacCabe and Kilgore's book serves, in their own words, as a 'focus of memory... evocative of the spirit rather than the detail of Laurel and Hardy's world." It's a thoughtful and loving account of the lives of the two comics who Marcel Marceau described as: "... two fools of God, two wonderful clowns at odds with themselves in the framework of a Victorian society which we still inhabit in many ways. They know how to slide over a banana peel, how to make reality absurd."

Old publishers' maxim: Nothing succeeds in the book trade like success.

Take the case of Paul Theroux, a 36-year-old American who lives currently in London for the somewhat ghoulish reason that he's in-terested in the anticipated final economic collapse of Britain. Theroux has lived and taught for 13 years in Italy, Malawi, Uganda, Singapore and way points. In the course of this time he has written several novels, none of them a notable success and some, indeed, published in obscurity abroad. Last year changed all that. Theroux, a longtime train buff, had the inspired idea of travelling across Europe and Asia by rail. The resulting non-fiction book, The Great Railway

During the hectic 13 years since Betty Friedan gave us.
The Feminine Mystique, she has not had the time to do another book because, she now writes, "I have been too busy acting ..." But now comes It. Changed My Life: Writings on the Women's Movement, and it looks and reads suspiciously like a book.

It Changed My Life is mostly a collection of speeches and ar-ticles Friedan has written for magazines over the past decade. The result is an I've-been-there-before hodge-podge of rhetoric, but no less valid for being stale. We find multiple restatements, first, of her THEROUX . . . grotesques writing of Graham Greene is only the recognition that Theroux is an inventive and provocative writer. This he surely is, as was demonstrated in The Great Railway Bazaar, yet Greene would never be guilty of such a cardboard cast of characters, a plot line totally

It is a dark, depressing, disagreeable story all but devoid of any quality of the reality to the found in even the most fanciful novel. To compare it, as some reviewers have, to the most form of the burnt of the author's delight in the IRA's use of terrorism in London, an episode now come to an end. There are others who have learned the feminist polemic well — no little thanks to Friedan — and who now can argue whether the internal fighting in NOW will demolish the mourement or whether the nguing in Now will demonstrate the movement; or whether the CIA and its snooping partners have been sabotaging the movement by sending in undercover radicals to scare off the mainstream. But only Friedan can tell us what it has been like for the mother of feminism to for the mother of feminism to live it. As she says in It Changed My Life: "In their personal lives, many women and men who can no longer live the way they used to are similarly paralyzed, in desperate need for a 'new yes.' I think we must once again put our theories and assumptions to the test of personal truth— our own lives ..." It is such a book of personal truths that, one hopes, Friedan will some-day, away from her "acting," undertake.
